COTTON BOLL

COTTON BOLL
FOR 1934

CENTRAL HIGH SCHOOL
JACKSON, MISSISSIPPI

COTTON BOLL

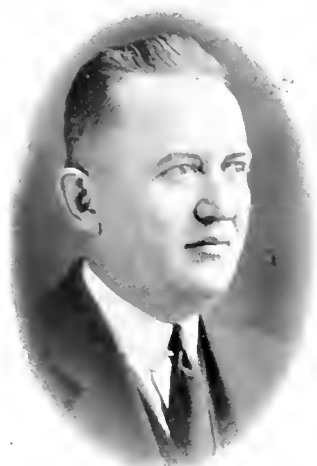

Allen County Public Library
900 Webster Street
PO Box 2270
Fort Wayne, IN 46801-2270

Foreword

The success or failure of this book will be determined by its value to you in years to come. The staff has tried to embody in cold print a little of the intangible spirit of Central High. If you can, in the future, scan these pages and relive in some measure your happy high school days, we will have succeeded.

COTTON BOLL

MR. JAMES G. CHASTAIN, JR.

Dedication

To our Superintendent and Class Sponsor who has exemplified all the ideals of our school, encouraged us when we were lagging, praised us when we were succeeding, always taken our interests to heart, made our tasks seem easier, and never lost his cheerful smile, we dedicate the Cotton Boll of 1934.

IN MEMORIAM

BESSIE LINN
WHITE

A Father's Tribute To His Daughter

Bessie Linn White is dead. They had to tell me about it, because in her final death agony I deserted her. When I could do no more, I ran away. She would not have left me so; she was too good a soldier for that. All her life she had been fighting battles—against odds—and the final struggle against death was her first defeat.

The longest battle of her career was in her school work, to overcome the handicap of a poor start in the elementary grades. For seven years, she spent every afternoon and three hours at night preparing her lessons. And, until last year she rarely made more than a passing grade. But she never gave up and she never failed. Last year things began to get easier for her, and her crowning triumph was a perfect grade in her final examination in mathematics. This year her progress was much smoother and more pleasant in all her subjects. She had the same fidelity to her tasks, but could afford to take time out to cultivate some friendships. She became a member of a little club of high school girls, who once or twice a week enjoyed together a wienie roast, or a candy pull.

There were no boys at these gatherings, but what jolly times the little friends had. Bessie Linn's time for a beau or sweetheart had not yet come, yet if you asked her what she wanted to be in life, she would tell you with beautiful simplicity that she'd like to be a wife and a mother. But till her death her dad was her only sweetheart; upon him she lavished all her thought and her affection. The seventy-five cents, which she had saved out of her lunch money, all went into Christmas presents for the others of the family, but of the amount she spent thirty-five cents for the pair of socks which she proudly hung on the Christmas tree addressed to "Dear Old Dad."

But sacrifice for others was fundamental in her character. It came so easy to her that she was never conscious of the beauty of her unselfishness. Her clothes, her amusements, her little treasures had always been simple almost to the point of penury, but from her there was no bitterness, no complaint, and no self-pity. She took what we could honestly afford and asked no more. For Christmas she had asked one gift only—a Senior ring of Jackson High School. That gift was not denied her, but it was deferred. Meanwhile she could be unaffectedly happy and satisfied. Even in her last illness she did not wish to be taken to the hospital for fear we could not afford it.

Unaffected simplicity and honesty in word and act became her like a garment. A lie was impossible to her nature; it did not occur to her to practice deception or guile. Her nature was forthright and genuine.

And today we bury all that is mortal of her. She goes in her simple little party dress—the only one she ever had. Those who would judge that her life has been meagre, should consider the inestimable riches of the character she had built for herself. She had that in her which deserves to live endlessly. Much of God I saw in her, and I must believe that her soul abides forever with Him in those reaches beyond our farthest star.

M. C. WHITE.

The Seniors

What ho?

Why the joyous escape?

Why the cap-and-gown parade?

Those for whom a crown is made.

The SENIORS!

They come!

They're ever passing, row by row,

As swiftly come, more swiftly go.

See their faces all aglow!

The SENIORS!

They march!

Joyous, vibrant, gay, alive!

Through this life to daily strive,

To carry on, to work, to thrive!

The SENIORS!

They're gone!

They whose high school days are done;

Whose battles now are fought and won;

Gallantly ended as begun.

The SENIORS!

What now?

Will they all find happiness

Guided by the star "Success?"

Let us hope that GOD will bless

The SENIORS!

Class Prophecy

Ages come and ages go but memories last forever. Time has passed swiftly since we were in high school and as the years go by, apparently increasing in speed as they increase in number, the recollections of our school days grow dearer.

If I hadn't seen Jack Reed working in Frank's Shoe Store last week I would never have discovered the various mockers and masters of trades our class has produced. Some have done well; some wisely; and some not at all. Some, I regret to say, I couldn't find. The number who have plunged headlong into the sea of matrimony are legion, in fact they are too many to mention.

It seems queer to think ten years have passed since we bade our last farewell to our Alma Mater, but they have passed and I do not begrudge the weeks spent in search for our old classmates.

Genevieve Wilde is a doctor now and opened her office in the Lamar Life Building last year.

Wayne Brown has his own filling station and is getting along fine with Dorothy.

Frank Owen and Rose Ellen Johnston finally married and now he can mark up the wall of his own house.

Margaret Biggs, and I might add she is Biggs no longer, has her hands full raising a family of little "Pauls" and "Megs."

Frances Eakin is still called "Chubby" by Helen Milner.

R. L. Brown has replaced Joe E. Brown in the movies.

Richard Davis, one of those strong, silent men, bought a ranch in Wyoming and is out among the wide open spaces.

Do you remember the girl who faced the ordeal of singing alone in music class unafraid? Well, Lucille Strahan recently signed a contract with the Metropolitan Opera Company.

Sidney Reber is one of our foremost financiers.

Last week while looking for a new apartment I discovered Nevin Bolen running a fashionable apartment house on North State.

Bill Bloomfield is certainly thriving in the field of journalism. Did you read his article on, "Why Women Should Not Go To War?"

Floy Beauchamp had begun the career of writing books on "Golden Thoughts" when Cupid shot her and now she is happily married and living in Wesson.

Billy Henderson accepted the Pictorial Review's offer to draw beautiful girls for the cover.

Rose Ellen Cottrell has written two books which are best sellers and her book of poetry goes to press next week.

F. M., better known as "Bruiser," Kinard is coaching football at dear old Central High.

Last summer when I attended the recital of the highly praised Berkley Muh, I wondered who the charming accompanist was. It was Ruth Ellzey.

Did you hear Joe Penix's orchestra last night? The announcer for that station is Douglas McDowall. Didn't he speak pleadingly while he was extolling the merits of "Sweetly Scented, Soft, Soap Suds for Scouring Soiled Skillets?"

I saw A. T. Shawhan Saturday. She and her aviator husband Frank Lofton are planning a trip similar to the one the Lindbergh's took in '33-'34.

The Commercial Appeal's editor is Billy Lauderdale.

W. L. Boyt is running a grocery store. Leave it up to Dubber to be sure of something to eat.

The Hy-Y leader for tenth grade girls is Jean Kinnaird. Jean is still here but now she's teaching English.

Ray Scott is the prosperous owner of a ladies-ready-to-wear shop.

Margaret Parker, who is quite versatile, has just finished a picture which the New York critics are raving about.

Bill Hardin flies the passenger plane from here to Los Angeles by way of Denver.

Eugenia Gober has married her preacher and is playing the organ in a church in a small town about twenty miles east of here.

Katherine Ellis and Sara Buie are co-editors of the "Life" and "Judge" magazines.

Mary Jo Stroud is singing in a night club accompanied by Rives Hutcherson's orchestra.

Emmett Wacaster has been in Congress a year now and is very interested in the Franco-German Peace Pact.

Lola Davis, who majored in physical education at Baylor is now the director of physical education for girls here. We are very proud of our gymnasium that Contractor S. T. Cone completed this summer. It has four playing courts and four dressing rooms.

Helen Pratt and Catherine Ricks are charming young models for Elgin Wells and William Bettersworth in New York. I hear they all like the night life there.

Ernest Brady was the Interior Decorator for our new Public Library.

George Forbes is now acting in the capacity of financial adviser to Billy Kimbrell and his dear wife, the former Miss Stella Frankinson. Billy, meanwhile, has become a famous divorce lawyer.

Rodney Gates is an insurance man and the town's most eligible bachelor.

Floyd Foster has gone in for drawing maps and playing the xylophone in a big way.

Juanita Crosby is Jean Harlow's head secretary.

Vincent Greco is a wholesale merchant in fruit.

I passed Marjorie Vest on the street the other day and she's still giggling.

Frances Fletcher is teaching second year algebra up here now.

Weren't you proud of Alonzo Westbrook when he made his speech at the Democratic Convention last fall? That boy is destined for the presidency.

Our brunette Mae West, Marie Austin is still making trips to French Camp.

Halbert Holder has lost two more teeth but not in the same manner that he lost his front one. He didn't swallow the other two.

And Mildred Aldridge, dear old Mildred, has joined the ranks of those who spar for life.

Leonard Clark is now a traveling salesman for "Dr. Makum Syche's Vegetable Tonic."

Lloyd Everett chose the kind of business one would last have any association with. He's an undertaker.

Helena Hare developed a mania for speed and entered the auto races in New Orleans to be held this coming summer.

Clifford Kip Macgowan has inherited the coffee interest and opened a branch in Memphis.

Fay Oppenheim, owner of five chain stores, is in New York buying the summer wardrobes for the women of Mississippi.

Jack Van Devender made a short visit in his home town recently when he returned with the Celtics. They played the Jackson team which is coached by Lavelle Sims.

Barbara La Belle Bennett is still leading men on and doesn't know whom she likes.

To think that Jimmy Powell and Woodrow Bonner won first place in the breast stroke and diving contests respectively in the Olympics!

Class History

At last we have come to our goal, and now we are ready to look back on the days that are gone by. Our history lives now in our own minds, but time dims all memories, and in later years it will be pleasant to recall memories of the long ago—"when we were young."

It was only a few years ago that a large group of Cubs started out to travel through the dense jungle of School. They had received advice from their friends and families, had been directed what road to take, but their parents could not go with them. For a number of years they had been training for this trip, but heretofore they had taken the matter not seriously, but lightly, as young cubs do.

Since the jungle was so deep and strange the Cubs were a little afraid and proceeded very cautiously. Time was pressing, however, there being a long journey of four years ahead of them, so they quickened their pace. When they entered the gloom of the deep forest they were met by a few elders, guides, whose valuable instruction and guidance was very much needed. Soon the Cubs learned how to proceed, the wisest ones following the advice of those older guides, who counselled them to use common sense and to go by the upper paths of hard study, honesty, and homework. The few who disregarded the advice of the guides by using no common sense and going by the lower paths of neglect of study, cheating, and no preparation, soon found that although they started out in the same direction as the others, the paths they had chosen led into sloughs of failure, swamps of laziness, and the den of the Exam tribe. Soon both groups were told that they must meet this wild tribe of Mid-Term Exams, and that preparation was necessary. Accordingly, each one paused to train himself as seemed best. Feeling superior to the others, or just feeling lazy, a few were so unwise as to neglect this proper training and as a result they were overcome by the difficulties encountered. Among this group were those who had taken the lower and seemingly easier road, where enemies were fewer. They had by taking side paths, avoided encounters with Assignments, Tests, and others, which their wiser friends had already conquered. After the encounter with the savage Exams the Cubs went on as before, some with pleasure now, others with dread. Towards the end of the year another tribe of Exams, called Final Exams confronted our little ones. This time only the weaker ones faced them for the guides had pointed out to those who had traveled and fought well, a new way out—pass the Exams by means of the bypath of Exemptions. Many were they who went that smooth way with joy. Of those who did face the Exams, some survived, while others were overcome and driven back. We see little of those now, for our eyes follow the ones that stepped forward. So ended the first year.

The growing Cubs now found themselves in a beautiful garden, called Summer Holidays, where no savage enemies came, and where they spent their time in ease and pleasure. Rest was surely pleasant after such hard toil; there they rested in preparation for the next year, which would be harder than the first. A few of the weak ones, realizing their weakness, but wishing to start out again with the others, did not live at ease in that beautiful garden of Summer Holidays, but fought and struggled off to one side, in the valley called Summer School Pass, with some of the enemies already conquered by the others. As a result, when the second year began they were tired and irritable, and soon slipped into their old easy ways. The second year passed much as had the first, though the way was now steeper and harder than before. A group of new guides led them, for the others were left behind to bring on new ones just starting their journey. In spite of the difficulty of the way and the strangeness of the guides, it seemed more pleasant to travel on. The growing Cubs found time for play as well as work, so they formed themselves into groups and made a game out of some of the tasks facing them. Their most savage enemies, Exams, came this year close on the heels of the strong tribes of History, Geometry, English, and others, in different parts of the paths. Again the conquered ones tried to catch up by going through the difficult Summer School Pass, while the others rested in ease and pleasure. So ended the second year.

As the Cubs met again the next year, they saw in each other that they had grown much. Time and experience had brought looks of courage and fortitude to their faces, a sense of strength and well-being to their bodies, a feeling of perseverance and ability to their minds. They were, indeed, no longer the little Cubs that had started out, though still cubs in years. However, they still had to look to their new guides for help and guidance, for there were many more dangers to meet, such as: Algebra, a great mountain covered with savage enemies, which must be met and conquered; more of the English tribe that they had met before; and other paths and enemies, ways by which some chose to go that they might be better fitted for future enemies to be met after scaling the peak of Graduation. Some of these were: Latin, a deep and wide river, filled with whirlpools and hidden rocks, which must be crossed; French, a valley of stones, which must be traversed; Physics, a path through a grove of trees, with deep hidden pools, lurking enemies, and dangerous pitfalls, which must be traveled; and others, too many to tell about. During this hard year a great many fell into the canyon of Flunk, and climbed out again only with great difficulty. Some were forced to turn back and start over on different paths, but others kept their faces turned ahead, and their eyes open to all the dangers, and beauties, too, of the path. Again they met Exams; again those same Exams were conquered by some, as before; again the Cubs stepped into the beautiful garden of Summer Holidays, some off to the side, as before.

By the fourth year of foraging in the jungle of School, the Cubs had grown into strong, confident, capable Tigers, full-grown, looking on the world with an air of ability and competence. Now the tribe of Mid-Term Exams held little dread for them, but many were the lofty hills and deep valleys to be crossed before the Tigers saw looming up before them the loftiest peak of all, Graduation. Those who had lagged behind hastened their steps when they saw it, and overtook the others. So intent were they on their goal that some forgot the savage Final Exams, a tribe of wild beasts which dwelt on the very mountain slopes. As a result, a few were defeated and sent to the foot of the peak to climb again, but most of our young friends climbed to the summit steadily, and there they at last looked out on the world—the jungle behind, new land in front—at the end of the long journey.

TO GRACE GILMORE

Our hearts are saddened by a fate
That has taken our dearest friend,
A flower whose bud was not fully open
But whose fragrance with life did blend.

Grace, your smiles were worth much
To friends who grieve their loss--

You little knew the joy you cast
When someone else was cross.

What a pity you had to leave us
Just when life had so much to give!

But God alone did the calling;
For a greater purpose he forbade you live.

To all the friends who mourn her passing

Let me cheer you with a word--

Grace is not dead, but gently sleeping
Only to be awakened by her Lord.

TO J. D. BROOKS

Like fallen forest monarch, conquered
by the storm
A vanquished hero, silent, pale, and cold;
To him our hearts in praise will ever warm
And in our thoughts his mem'ry we will hold.

The icy hand of grasping, clutching death,
The tyrant master of the final hour,
Drew from this youth life's fleeting breath
And placed him in the grave 'neath sod and flow'r.

We know he's living on this day
With Heaven's happy, singing horde;
"The Lord giveth and He taketh away,
Blessed be the name of the Lord."

Football

A casual glance at the scores would leave the impression that the Tigers had an unsuccessful season in football. From the point of view of games won this is true. The boys lost seven straight games before finally defeating Biloxi. Then they held Meridian to a scoreless tie.

Yet in other ways the results were satisfactory. The students supported their team in spite of adversity and the school spirit they displayed was excellent. The fine sportsmanship of the players is especially to be commended. It was a credit to the coaches and to the school. And after all are not those the things which really count?

Great treasures must pass on so we send our captain and stalwart, "Bruiser" Kinard, onward to make his fame on college gridirons. He has left a great position to be filled. Can his brother George fill it? And there went a red head through tackle, of course! It was "Red" Summers. We must pass on more good men, too. There is "Mamie" Pridgen and those churning knees, and at last "Skeeter" Simpson will catch no more passes for the Tigers, nor will "Wolf" Van Devender cover any more of Billy Harris' long punts. "Grind" Thomas leaves the pigskin to Averitte. "Coon" Thomas moves on to catch somebody else's passes. There will always be a picture of R. W. Carter "bustin'" Meridian's line to pieces. Our blonde-headed Cullen left his name with us as a football hero. Carmichael and Wright, who fought valiantly and well, leave us together. "Russian Red" Davis plowed along, saying nothing but fighting hard. And will Coach Broyles ever find someone to take the place of his one and only George Forbes?

Central High mourns their passing. Yea, Our Tigers!

THE CHEERLEADERS

We express our appreciation to the loyal service of our cheerleaders for their lusty shouts, their locomotive yells, and their extreme agility. The girls were an inspiration to the cheering section. The boys were on hand to boost that inspiration. So to our cheerleaders, Chambers, McRae, Riblet, Westbrook, Frankinson, and Kimbrell, we pay our respects.

Boys Basketball

Sixteen victories and three defeats is a record of which any team could be proud. The '34 Tigers possess this record and a beautiful silver trophy as testimony of an excellent basketball team. Working with a squad of comparatively inexperienced men Coach Tommy Naylor developed a fine team. After winning eleven games they lost one to White Oak. Then, as it would be, our rival Meridian won the other two from us.

The Big 8 Basketball Tournament was held at Jackson this year for the first time in history and was a very great success in every way. The Tigers easily defeated three strong teams to gain the championship. Throughout the season our players displayed the highest type of sportsmanship, but Jackson teams always do. That is why we are so proud of them. The students showed their deep appreciation by their attendance—and their cheering. Memories of Captain Garrett and his fighting team will live with us forever. Yea, Our Tigers!

Girls Basketball-A Novelty

Girls' Basketball, a new sport at Central High, has won its place among our athletics. Our girls' team, under the excellent coaching of Miss Elizabeth Taylor, very ably represented our school this season. Winning seventeen games and losing only nine, they were successful in the scoring phase. They were eliminated from the Big 8 Tournament by Brookhaven in a very close game. The introduction of athletics for girls has given them a personal interest in this phase of school life and has done much toward interesting the girls in physical education and athletics. Yea, Our Tigresses!

Absent-Minded Cornelius

There was a boy named Cornelius
So absent-minded was he,
That he'd put his ice in his coffee
And stir his spoon with his tea.

He'd put his hat in the corner
And hang his cane on the rack,
And at breakfast he'd scratch the pancakes
And pour the syrup down his back.

He came in one rainy morning
From a President's Birthday Ball,
Put the umbrella under the covers,
And leaned all night 'gainst the wall.

He'd comb his beard in the morning,
And carefully shave off his hair;
He'd throw his clothes in the bathtub,
And drape himself over a chair.

Our hero wanted employment,
And at last he found a good place;
But he spoke to the clock in the morning
And punched the boss in the face.

He went to the court as a witness.
The judge said, "Take the stand, there."
He took the stand on his shoulder,
And said to the judge, "Take it where?"

Cornelius was leaving his home-folks.
At heart he was sniff'ring great pain;
But he jumped upon his old mother,
After sweetly kissing the train.

He thought a chocolate Nut Sundae
Was the Negroes' Sabbath Day
At the State insane asylum,
Where the rest of his kind stay.

He went to work in an orchard,
And came out with a broken knee,
For he sat on the end of the branches
While sawing them next to the tree.

At night when he was retiring
He'd take off the clothes that he wore;
He'd carefully wind up the kitten
And throw the clock out the door.

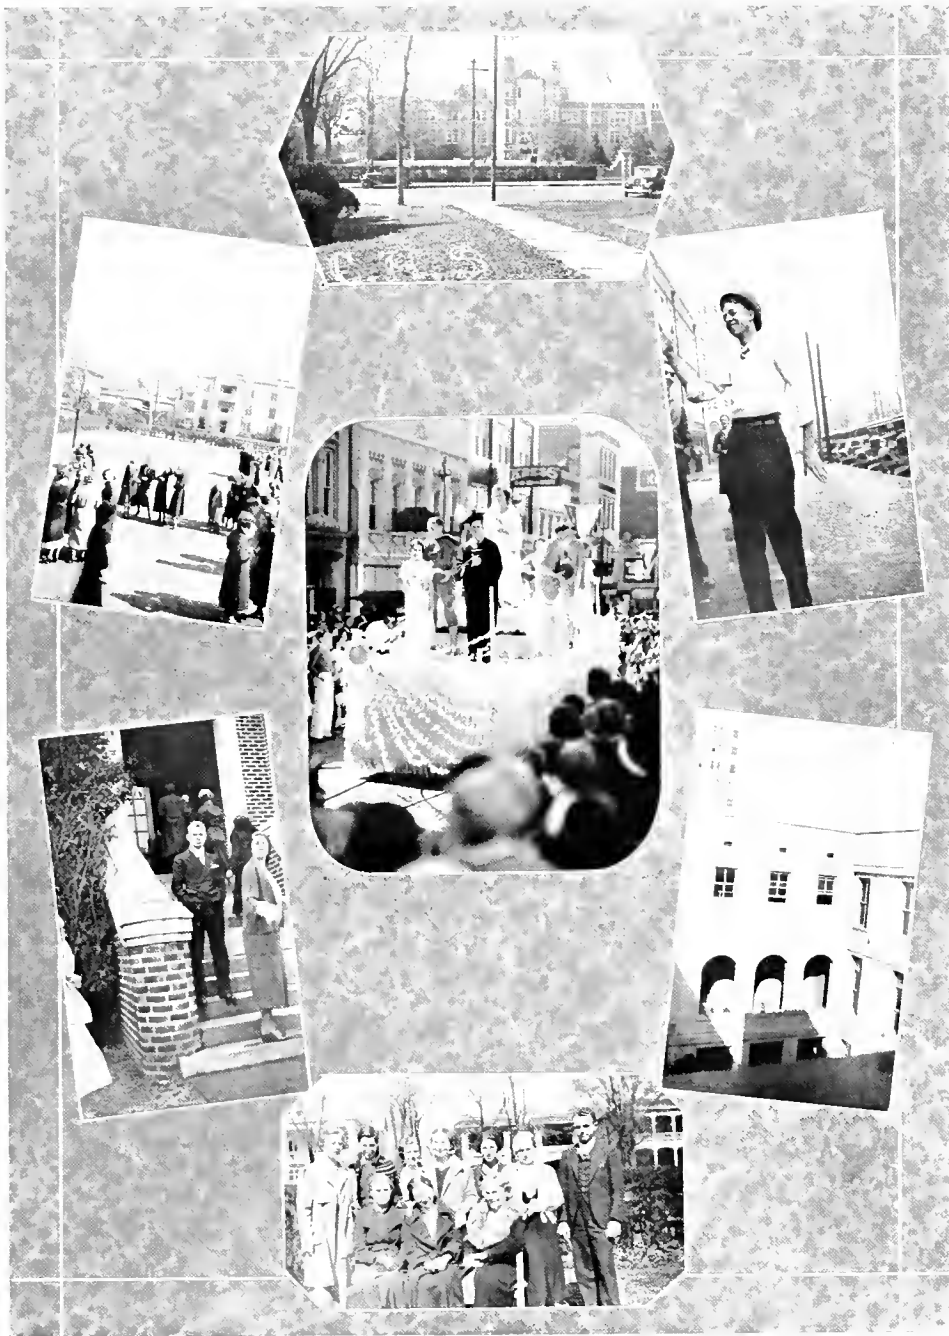

Cornelius took up chemistry
And now he's with us no more
For he thought that H_2O
Was H_2SO_4 .

The Calendar

October:

6. Tiger Talks float wins parade contest. Maybe Catherine Ricks as Miss Public Schools had something to do with that.
15. The Fair has come to town—very little studying done.
16. New Football Jerseys received.
23. Students broke—Fair's over.

November:

5. Band makes first out-of-town trip to Tylertown. Jackson High School Band, if you please.
11. American Legion presents flag and flagstaff in pompous ceremony on school yard.
15. High school principal discovers our beloved Annual editor under boarding house table.
23. Stewart Broome elected Junior Class president.
- 23-4. "Little Almond Eyes" Chinese Operetta presented.
26. School catches Meridian fever—serious malady.
29. Janitors give up trying to erase "On To Meridian" signs.
30. Jackson O, Meridian ditto; Meridian still picking up what pieces are left. Whatta' trip!

December:

3. Some bright person discovers that the school colors are not black and orange—they are gold and white!
10. Much-needed school repairs begun through C. W. A. funds.
12. Burglars break in school—food for talk.
23. Kids strangely obedient and respectful at home—wonder why?
25. Cads nurse sore fingers from mouse traps set in stockings.

January:

1. Many worthy and honorable resolutions made.
2. Many worthy and honorable resolutions broken.
3. Utica Jubilee singers give performances.
8. First flag raising ceremony—on the coldest day of the year.
19. C. W. A. Painters' cars mysteriously transported to one of the interior courts—and advance Easter egg hunt following.
25. Blue Mountain Players present the Fool (no High School student is, don't worry).
26. Troubles begin.

February:

1. Severe case of examitus over.
3. Teachers get laughs from exam answers.
8. Shakespeare proven originator of many "modern" slang phrases.
16. Auditorium gets new coat of paint.
21. Liquid Air demonstration at Enochs Junior High School.
22. George Washington celebration at City Auditorium.
24. Tigers win Big 8 Basketball Tournament.

March:

11. Lloyd Everett inaugurates Spring with a light gray suit and white shoes—the oily boid!
18. Popularity contest results were published.
25. Mississippi Literary Examinations were held. Jackson scored several times.

April:

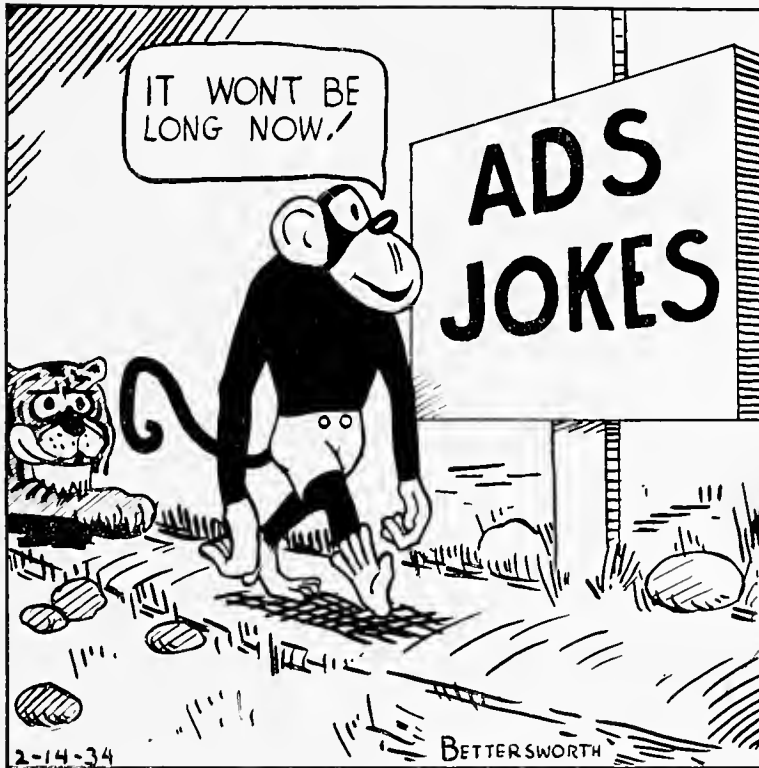

3. Hughie Critz of the New York Giants, Mississippi's "Big Time" Ball Player and Walter Johnson of the Cleveland Indians spoke to the boys in chapel.
- 9-10. The biggest event of the year. We had a good laugh at the teachers in the presentation of "Sonia." Mr. Roberts was treated badly as Count Ginwhiske; Mr. Beckett gave us a treat, and Coach Broyles did look tough.
16. The Senior Social Season is at hand. Everyone wonders if he will get an "invite."
20. We enjoyed a holiday for the M. E. A.! and how!
26. Junior Class Burlesque. (D. C. is responsible for the laughs in that performance.)

May:

11. The nervous strain is excruciating. (All we poor seniors must take exams.)
20. Exams over—papers graded. We fought a good fight—we kept the faith—we are still seniors.
21. Starting long days of arduous toil on graduation exercises.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE

Fully Approved by the Association of American Universities.

MILLSAPS gives four free-tuition scholarships each year to Central High School graduates.

MILLSAPS gave $1080.00 last year in reduced tuition to Central High School graduates of superior scholastic achievement.

MILLSAPS tuition and fees are 39% lower than the average of other southern colleges on the American University Approved List.

Attend your home-town school and save your money for University or professional training.

D. M. KEY, President.

Mr. Barnett: Do any of the questions bother you?

Geraldine Roberts: No sir, the questions are quite clear. It's the answers that bother me.

Shelton Bolen: Why do they call Bert "The Flower of the School?"

Kenneth Coleman: Because he is such a blooming idiot.

Photographer: Do you want a large or a small picture?

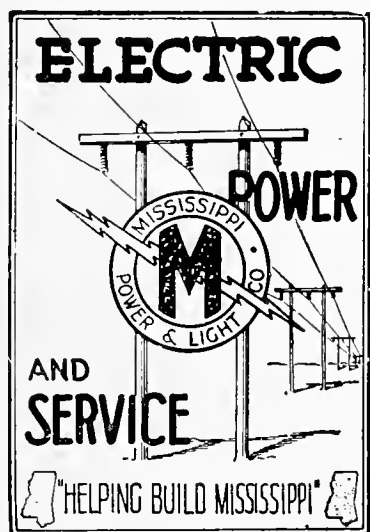

Erwin Graham (having his picture made for the annual): A small one.

Photographer: Then close your mouth.

Soma Cox: I wish Shakespeare had been a Frenchman.

Kathryne Browne: Why?

Soma Cox: That's what he was on my exam paper.

Dad: What made young Smith stay so late last night, Mary?

Mary: I was showing him some of my picture post cards.

Dad: Well, the next time he comes, show him some of my electric light bills.

Helen Milner: Is your watch running?

Ethan Allen: Yes, but I can't tell whether it's slow or fast. It loses fifteen minutes in five minutes.

Miss Clingan: Give a year and the number of bales of cotton exported by the U. S. during that year.

Rives Hutchinson: 1492—none.

Dear Mr. Palmolive:

I bought a tube of your shaving cream. It says no mug required. What shall I shave?

Yours truly,
